

ABSTRACTERGONOMIC TRAY

5

Ergonomic tray with a smooth central surface used to support and carry various items and food. The tray lip is interrupted at least on one side by an incut that constitutes the tray handle. This handle has an ergonomic rounded concave shape to allow a perfect coupling of a hand in the handle. The handle is located next to one of the rounded vertices of the tray, where the user's wrist will rest when the tray is held with the hand. Both ends of the handle are rounded ends, continuous on one end with the tray lip and on the other end with one of the vertices of the tray.
